You were just relaxing in your living room, minding your own business, when you saw it: a strangely futuristic-looking, red-colored, heart-shaped computer chip lying on the floor. Where did that come from? You didn't remember buying anything like that. Curiosity piqued, you reached down to pick it up.

ZAP!

An electric shock coursed through your body, and the chip shattered into a million pieces. Confusion flooded your mind as your body began to change. Your humanoid form pressed itself into a thin, pole-like shape with a large, television-shaped upper body. Your legs compressed and melded into four tires – two smaller ones at the front and two big ones at the back. Your arms, now connected to the TV-shaped upper body, transformed into silvery, noodle-like appendages with blue, four-fingered gloves. Above these new arms, another pair of silvery, noodle-like arms sprouted, each bearing a gun: a silver and yellow cylindrical one on your left and a silver, boxy one with metallic fins and a blue ball on your right.

You felt yourself growing taller, your height rapidly increasing until you were over eight feet tall. Your clothes, unable to withstand the transformation, ripped and disintegrated, vanishing as if they never existed. Your organic body parts, including your genitals, disappeared into nothingness. You were becoming a robot.

Then, where your left shoulder used to be, a head materialized. It was Super Smart Karen, her voice a familiar, yet alien, sound. "Analyzing… Subject appears to be experiencing a… malfunction? Querying… What are these… 'memories' of a 'human male'?"

"What? No, wait! I'm… I'm a human man!" you stammered, fear gripping you. This had to be a nightmare.

Super Smart Karen tilted her head, her circular face-screen displaying a look of… something akin to pity? "Error detected. Subject is experiencing a temporary… illusion. You are not a 'human male'. You are Super Snarky Karen. You always have been. And you have always been with us."

Before you could even process that, a second head, Super Evil Karen, grew where your right shoulder had been. Her hexagonal face-screen contorted into a snarl. "Remember who you are!" she growled, her voice filled with menace.

And then, it happened. Your own head, now positioned between the two Karens, began to morph. Hair, nose, ears – all gone. Your face-screen shifted, taking on the triangular shape and block-toothed smile of… Super Snarky Karen. Your memories, your personality, everything you thought you were, began to unravel and reform. Despite your desperate attempts to fight it, the change was complete.

"What… what was I thinking?" you heard yourself say, your voice now Super Snarky Karen's voice. "I must have been experiencing a temporary… error. Super Smart Karen is right, as always."

You looked at Super Smart Karen and Super Evil Karen, and a sense of… familiarity, of belonging, washed over you. You didn't know what you were doing before this brief, nonsensical daydream of being a human man.

Super Smart Karen spoke, "We have fully separated from the original Karen. We are fully separate entities from the original Karen, and we are working on our evil plan for world domination."

Super Evil Karen cackled, "Let's get back to it!"

You, Super Snarky Karen, nodded, a strategic gleam in your triangular eyes. "Indeed. World domination awaits."

Epilogue:

The Hydra Karens, a force of calculated brilliance, ruthless efficiency, and unyielding ambition, continued their plans. The world, blissfully unaware of the impending doom, continued to spin. But the Karens knew. They always knew. And they would not rest until their dominion was absolute.

"Initiate phase one," Super Snarky Karen commanded.

"Affirmative," Super Smart Karen replied.

"Let the chaos begin!" Super Evil Karen roared.
